Builders Association of Greater Indianapolis (BAGI) Hires Government Affairs Director

Indianapolis, IN – The Builders Association of Greater Indianapolis (BAGI) announced today the hiring of Kate Johnson, the new Government Affairs Director. BAGI is bringing back the Government Affairs position after having to eliminate the position in 2010 as a result of the downtown in the economy.

Johnson previously worked for BAGI from 2006 to 2010 in the Government Affairs Division and went on to hold positions at the City of Indianapolis as their Public Information Officer, Legislative Liaison and Deputy Director of the Department of Code Enforcement, where she oversaw permitting and licensing. Most recently, Johnson served at the Director of Government Affairs for Stand for Children-Indiana where she served as a lobbyist to ensure all children have access to quality education.

“We are thrilled Kate will be returning to the BAGI Team,” says Steve Lains, BAGI’s Chief Executive Officer. “With the steady economic improvement in Central Indiana it is clear that our association needs to revive this position. It is important to our membership and to the local municipalities to have a point of contact and to ensure the lines of communication are open on all levels. With Kate’s impressive background and experience, she will be a huge asset to our organization,” says Lains.

Johnson begins her new role on Monday, July 28. For additional information or interview, please contact me at the above listed numbers.

The Builders Association of Greater Indianapolis is a professional trade association representing residential homebuilders, associates and remodelers. For more information call 317-236-6330; or visit for permits from 2000-2014.
